

GCS Plans To Quiz North End Residents On Desire For Own Shopping Services

A study of the needs and wishes of North End residents highlighted the GCS board meeting last Friday night. John Brown has been selected by the board to determine whether north-enders would use a separate complete shopping service when the super-market is finished.

Mr. Brown hopes to reach the majority of the residents through court and neighborhood meetings. 17 meetings have been scheduled so far, with Dayton Hull, Waldo Mott, Carnie Harper, David Granahan, Bruce Bowman, Merton Trast, Sam Ashelman and Mike Watson on call to participate in the discussions and answer questions. As part of each meeting, a questionnaire will be distributed to people attending the meetings to consolidate their opinions and wishes.

"Would you use a parcel delivery service at a 10c fee?" and "If there were both stores," (that is, the new super-market and a new store at the north-end) "would you prefer shopping at the planned Center market or at a larger food store in the North End, which would include these departments: Groceries, Meats, Produce" are questions expected to show what expansion is most needed at the north-end.

The board appointed Merton Trast and Paul Linson to the board of directors of the cooperative FM station. Members of the board are elected by co-ops holding common stock in the Potomac Cooperative Broadcasting Company.

General Manager Sam Ashelman reported on his recent visit to the Catasqua Cooperative and the Jersey Cooperative, both in Pennsylvania. Mr. Ashelman spoke at the annual meeting of the two co-operatives. On his return trip he visited the Lehigh Valley Cooperative, a dairy co-op, and reported that some of the products of the co-op might be of interest to GCS. Mr. Ashelman stated that the dairy makes an especially fine ice cream and ice cream mix, and expressed the hope that arrangements might be made for GCS to have ice cream made to its specifications.

Bruce Bowman stated that GCS had been asked by the local chapter of the National Council of Jewish Women to be one of the participating organizations in the Inter-Faith Forum which is being jointly sponsored by the Council and the Citizens Association. The Board approved the request and agreed to aid the Forum in any way possible.

Dayton Hull reported on the decision made by the Potomac Cooperative Federation in regard to the request of the Committee for Racial Democracy for support of the recent report of the Council of Social Agencies recommending that racial discrimination be ended in the District. He stated that the Federation agreed to support the recommendation but not to take an active part in their campaign. Board discussion on this was postponed to a later date.

Battery Blown-Up Injures Workman

A battery blew up at the Town warehouse located near the garbage disposal plant, on January 21, spattering acid into the face and eyes of Melvin Simms of Branchville, a maintenance department employee who was alone in the building at the time. Mr. Simms was blinded for a while and couldn't turn in the alarm. When another worker came in and heard what sounded like an explosion, he called the Greenbelt police who applied first aid and took Mr. Simms to the doctor. Mr. Simms' injury was not serious.

The Greenbelt Fire Department was called to put out a fire in the car of L. Tierney, 7-L Southway, on Thursday, January 23. The fire, started by the gasoline in the carburetor flowing onto the overheated motor, caused $50 damage to the car.

Coming Events

The first outward manifestation of the new super-mart scheduled for erection this Spring appeared this week in the Center. The architects set up near the statue some bulky apparatus to test the soil at various depths, in order that the cost of excavation may be estimated.

Ruth Bowman New President Of GHA

Mrs. Ruth Bowman achieves the distinction of being the first woman president of the Greenbelt Health Association in its nine-year history. She succeeds Herbert Hertz who served as president for three years and who will retain his directorship on the board. Mrs. Bowman was unanimously elected for this office by the board at its executive meeting last Thursday. She had previously served six months on the Association board as educational chairman.

Other officers elected are: James Walsh, vice president; Ben Rosenzweig, secretary; and Tom Ritchie, treasurer.

Mrs. Bowman, 14-Z-3 Laurel Hill Road, has been interested in co-operatives since her Antioch college days where she majored in child development. She is a member of the Women's Discussion Group of the Community Church and of the GCS Consumers Advisory Committee. She served as a block collection leader for CARE and on the Community Chest drive, and has been secretary of the Antioch College Alumni Group for the Washington area.

Her husband Bruce is equally well known in Greenbelt. He is secretary of the Citizens Association and GCS educational chairman on the GCS board. There are two young Bowmans, Peter, 7, and Sandy, 3.

Commenting on Mr. Hertz's resignation, one of the board members said, "The association membership and the community at large owes a debt of gratitude to Herbert Hertz. His efforts were tireless, and during a critical time he helped make available to the community a medical service of exceptionally high calibre".

Rent Rumor False Cormack States

FPHA Manager Charles M. Cormack denied on Tuesday that FPFA is contemplating placing all Greenbelt homes on a "flat" rental basis.

A report had reached the Co-operator that such a rent schedule was in prospect for Greenbelt, but Mr. Cormack stated to a Co-operator reporter that not only did he have no knowledge of such a move but believed it inconsistent with present FPFA policy.

Mr. Cormack pointed out this policy has reduced the rent of some 33 families living in Greenbelt's defense section, where circumstances warranted such a reduction.

Center Cafeteria To Open Feb. 15

The new cafeteria will boast three stoves, a large sink, a steam table, counters, and a large refrigerator. At present only the painting work remains to be completed.

An official O. K. was pronounced this week by Miss Eleanor Wegley, cafeteria supervisor for Prince Georges County, who visited the basement room with Mrs. Elizabeth Fugitt, Center School principal and Manager Cormack.

Jim Brenon Adds To March of Dimes

By JUNE RINGEL

Jimmie Brenon, the 14-year-old Greenbelt boy who has a first hand knowledge of the good done by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, contributed $50 to the Greenbelt March of Dimes last Tuesday. This represented an accumulation of 500 Roosevelt dimes which Jimmie's family and friends have given him during the six months he has been in the hospital.

Jimmie was suddenly stricken with polio last August 5 and had to be kept in a respirator in the hospital for 15 days. His arms were paralyzed as well as his body from his waist down. Last September he started saving Roosevelt dimes in a glass pig bank for the March of Dimes. Before Christmas, friends who visited Jimmie at the hospital asked the nurses what sort of gifts they could get for him. They discovered that his hobby was collecting Roosevelt dimes and so he got quite a few of them for Christmas.

When the March of Dimes drive was started Jimmie drew little posters to be attached to the bottles which were placed around the hospital to collect dimes. In addition to the $50 he contributed to Greenbelt, Jimmie gave these bottles a good start by dropping $10 worth of dimes in them.

Although it is not known how long he will have to remain in the hospital, the doctor is pleased with the progress Jimmie is making. He is very cheerful and happy about receiving letters and cards from his Greenbelt friends and neighbors. He is continuing his studies of Latin, algebra and English at the hospital under the guidance of a visiting teacher. He has shown an aptitude in art and is also studying that subject.

The $50 which Jimmie presented to James T. Gobel, town manager, who visited him in Children's Hospital, brings the total of envelope donations made in Greenbelt up to $753.72 as of last Tuesday. Of this amount $543.30 represents 291 individual contributions and four contributions from organizations.

The collections made in the theatre have not as yet been counted, nor have the contents of the boxes which have been placed in all the stores. Collections are also being made in the Center and North End Schools as well as in the Greenbelt High School.

This weekend there will be a booth in the shopping center with bottles representing the various states. The booth will be under the supervision of the Women's Sodality on Thursday, the Community Church Guild on Friday and the Women's Club on Saturday. Mrs. Lloyd Nelson of the Women's Club was in charge of all arrangements for this booth. The Girl Scouts, Brownies and Leaders will handle the collections in the theatre this weekend.

Bauer, Gobel To Make Chicago Trip; Morrison Opposes Charter Changes

A trip to Chicago, Greendale, and Greenhills for Greenbelt's mayor and town manager was authorized by the Town Council Monday night.

The meeting also included a strong statement from Councilman Allen D. Morrison against any charter changes now, and a discussion of the need for a lighted sidewalk between the road and the high school.

Put It In Writing So Council Can Act

"If citizens don't like airplanes flying low over town or the transportation facilities between Greenbelt and Washington, please let us know," Town Manager James T. Gobel announced at Monday's council meeting.

Mr. Gobel went on to explain that the council and the town manager are powerless to effect any improvements unless there is real backing by the residents, preferably in writing.

He reminded those present that if a plane is flying low enough so that the number can be read, it is flying too low and should be reported.

Only one written complaint on the present system of bus-street car facilities to Washington has been received, he reported. If more come in, the town will be in a better position to secure improved transportation.

$2800 Raised For Canteen In Five Weeks

Approximately $2,800 was reported raised by the Ways and Means Committee, for the new youth canteen after five weeks' work.

The raffie committee headed by George Pagoulis raised $3,434.75 with a net profit of $2,002.35. The Contribution drive headed by Mrs. Joe Rogers has on hand $525 with around $100 more pledged and the dance netted approximately $200.

The 1946 Ford, raffled off at midnight on Saturday before a crowd of over 400 people, was won by Mrs. Anne Childress of 60-F Crescent Road. The $50 prize for selling the winning ticket went to Mrs. John Belton. Jean Warner of WRC, guest soloist for the evening, drew the winning ticket from the barrel.

Mayor Bauer presented Jerry Cowell and Donnie Wolfe with a $5 prize each for their work on the raffie. In a raffie book selling contest for the teen-agers of the town, Jerry Cowell took top place with 136 books sold from door to door. Donnie Wolfe accounted for nearly 200 by taking over selling at the center where the car was on display.

Scheduled for the week of February 9, the purpose of the trip is to gather information for zoning and building ordinances to be enacted here on the basis of the land-use plan presented on January 13 by Hale Walker, architect retained by the Federal Public Housing Authority.

In Chicago, Mayor Bauer and Town Manager Gobel will consult with experts of the City Managers Association. Progress made in zoning the other two "green towns" will be studied. The trip is scheduled for the week of February 9.

Without giving specific reasons for opposing the charter changes first proposed by Mayor Bauer on October 28, Mr. Morrison was emphatic in stating that he was "all for letting the charter stand as it is" and that "to upset matters now would throw us in bad shape." He said that he had found much opposition to the proposal among residents.

Most of the changes suggested by Mr. Bauer sprang from his objection to "absolute power" being vested in the town manager.

At the October meeting, it was agreed that the town solicitor be asked to confer with the council on charter amendments. To date such a conference has not been arranged, and it is believed that the matter may be indefinitely postponed as only one member of the council, John Cain, has openly supported the mayor's stand.

Robert F. Dove, representing a committee of the high school PTA, requested the council for action in getting a lighted sidewalk put in from the corner of Edmonston and Greenbelt roads to the nearest entrance of the high school.

He reported no success in securing from the county anything better than a promise to include the work in "next year's budget."

Community Manager Charles M. Cormack was reported as willing to have the government force clear the land, and Mr. Dove suggested that the town put in the sidewalk. It was agreed that Mr. Gobel would consult further with the county on the matter and that all effort be directed to improving the corner before the next school year.

Paul Dunbar presided at the meeting in the absence of Mayor Bauer.

Racial Equality In Name Only

At its last meeting the Potomac Cooperative Federation, in which the Greenbelt co-op holds membership, voted to endorse the report against segregation submitted by the Committee on Social Relations of the Council of Social Agencies of Washington. The report was directed toward improving facilities for colored people in Washington. However, the Potomac Federation refused the Committee's request that letters be sent to the Washington papers announcing the Federation's endorsement of the report.

The Rochdale co-op in Washington has since endorsed the report and agreed to send letters to the local newspapers. Discussion on this question has been scheduled for the next GCS board meeting.

The reasons advanced by members of the Federation for the decision to endorse but not participate in the campaign against racial segregation were that they believed the Federation, as such, should confine its propaganda activities to purely economic or cooperative affairs. They also believe that it would handicap the cooperative idea to involve itself with movements of this nature.

A great many members of the Greenbelt co-op would and will argue that this is sophistry, and that no economic group exists in a vacuum. We were forced to meddle in politics to protect our consumer interests on more than one occasion—a recent one being our endorsement of OPA and our attempts to influence Congress to keep a strong OPA. Our adherence to the Rochdale principles, which stipulate membership open to all, in itself makes us part of the fight for racial and religious democracy.

However, one point made by a Federation spokesman is a telling one. He insists that a majority of the members of the Potomac cooperatives (including Greenbelt) would not, if polled, endorse active participation in such a campaign. This argument cannot be answered, of course, except by an actual vote. But every suspicion that a majority of our members do not believe in racial equality and the necessity for the removal of segregation barriers shows the need for an immediate, well-planned and long-range program of education and discussion within our co-op.

As our cooperatives grow we will inevitably be faced more and more with the problems of our attitude toward a great many questions which vitally affect not only our economic but our political life. As consumers we are concerned with the welfare of the farmer, and the laborer, and with the Maryland State Legislature which is attempting to change the tax situation as it affects cooperatives. The field of strictly "economic" problems can widen or narrow, according to our interpretation. Our interpretation should be based on frank, full and open discussion, and our cooperative is not fulfilling all of its functions if adequate provision for such discussion is not made.

Local Women Top Merrick 32-17

The Greenbelt Women's team chalked up another basketball victory last Monday when they defeated Merrick's by a 32-17 score.

The game was a rather slow one, as both teams seemed to have difficulty getting the ball to stay in the basket once it got in that vicinity. The ball time and again rolled around the rim and then bounced off for no score. The Greenbelt team, however, snapped out of it long enough to chalk up the winning total.

Ora Donoghue, held to a two-point score for the first half, rang up 13 more points in the last half for high scorer. Eileen Mudd added seven more points after connecting with some well-timed passes from Ruth Elly. Betty Dickson put in two beautiful long shots while Elly and Marion Benson added two and one basket respectively. Marge Dulin's height came in handy under the basket where she was successful in picking many a ball off the backboard to return to the local forwards. The local team has lost two, tied one and won two in the District Recreation League.

Woman's Club Group Hears Medical Head

At a meeting of the Welfare Department of the Woman's Club held last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Francis A. Shea, Dr. Dean Roberts, chief of the Bureau of Medical Services, Maryland State Department of Health explained the medical care program of the State. The 1945 session of the General Assembly passed a law authorizing the Department of Health to provide medical, dental, pharmaceutical and other services for persons living in the counties of Maryland who are unable to provide themselves with proper medical care. Application may be made direct to a physician or to the County Health Department and eligibility is determined by the County Health Officer. Persons eligible may choose their own physician or dentist who sends his bill direct to the Health Department for payment. Dr. Roberts stated that it is hoped to have a cancer clinic at the Prince Georges County Hospital in Cheverly before long.

Plans have been completed for the Valentine Dance to be held Saturday, February 15 in the Elementary School Auditorium, announced Mrs. Miles Bonnar, chairman of Ways and Means. Tickets were distributed to all members for sale. The dance, held annually, is for the purpose of raising money for the welfare activities of the club. Walter Hubbel's orchestra from Baltimore will play for dancing from 9 to 1 with admission $1.00 per person, tax included.

Lake Survey Held

A preliminary survey of the Greenbelt Lake recently conducted by members of the local Izaak Walton League indicated to the group a need of screening around the spillway to prevent the escape of fish. This would be a major step in the League's projected plan to improve the lake as a game fishery.

The surveyors, Charles East, president; William Rupert, vice president; and Dr. Norman Olsen, chairman of the Fisheries Committee, made other recommendations which include replenishing the stock of fish, eliminating oil film on waters leading into the lake, and stopping any further damage from oil and other pollution.

Also suggested was fertilization to promote the growth of plants necessary for food and hiding places for certain types of fish, as well as an educational program for children to prevent their damaging of the lake property.

The League plans to help Boy Scout Troop 202 construct a nature trail from the end of Northway Road through the woods to the Beltsville Experimental Farm.

Sam Wallis, member of Troop 202's committee and Mr. East led the Scouts in a recent examination of the area to determine the route of the trail. It will be ready for nature study excursions as soon as identifying labels are attached to plants and trees and the path is cleared, according to Mr. Wallis.

Double Cage Game Set For Monday

The Greenbelt Center Gym will be the scene of a doubleheader basketball game Monday night, February 3. The G.A.C. team will play host to a strong Fort Myer (South Post) aggregation and the Junior Reps will take on the Hyattsville Boys Club. The Fort Myer team, with its impressive record, may prove to be a difficult hurdle for the Clubbers. Player-coach Clay's comment was: "This is just a sample of some of the strong teams we will meet this year! We have a strong team and plan to take on all comers! Bar none!" Clay mentioned that his starting lineup would probably be: Burt and Gardner, forwards; Lindeman, center; O'Connell and Provost, guards.

The Junior Reps, who lost to Hyattsville in a previous game, will be out to turn the tables.

Tonight the G.A.C. team will journey to Fort Myer to play the North Post team, having played the Naval Air Station at Anacostia last Wednesday. The results of these games were not available at the time the paper went to press, but will be published in next week's paper.

Dr. Boswell Speaks

Dr. Victor Boswell of the Department of Agriculture led a discussion on Japan last Monday evening at a meeting of the Laurel Hill Discussion Group at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Green, 2-D Laurel Hill Road. Dr. Boswell, a horticulturist at Beltsville, was loaned to the War Department last year and sent to General Headquarters in Japan. For seven months he acted as scientific consultant and advisor to the Japanese people for whose agricultural problems he has great sympathy. He travelled through the rural districts to observe the farms and the work of the farmers who were mostly women and older men. The crops are mainly barley and rice, and new potatoes are being tried as a crop. Differences in languages proved a barrier in the use of scientific terms which Dr. Boswell had to employ in showing the farmers how to improve their methods. Dr. Boswell, described, with accompanying kodachrome films, the many diverse problems such as the very small farms, the control of disease, and the rehabilitation program.

Ironmen Chalk Up 5th Straight Win

The Ironmen of the Greenbelt Recreation League won their fifth straight victory Thursday, January 23, defeating the Tigers 22 to 15. Red O'Connell, stellar Ironmen guard, came through in the closing minutes of the game with two baskets to sew up the game. Thirty-six fouls were called against both sides during the game and most of points were made on the charity stripe. The score was tied a number of times during the game and it was only after O'Connell started hitting the hoop that the Ironmen pulled away from their opponents.

The Chiefs trounced the Terps by a score of 38 to 24. Mothershead was the big gun for the Chiefs, scoring 13 points. Niehart and Cawley each registered 8 points. The Terps, who had lost only to the Ironmen in their four previous engagements, was the favored team but could not get going as Provost, Fox and Brewer were kept pretty well bottled up.

The Swabbies beat the Senators 60 to 32. Two new marks were recorded in this one-sided Swabbie-Senator game. The 60 points scored by the Swabbies and the 24 points dropped in by "Ladder" Lindeman, Swabbie center, were the highest for the season. Lindeman now leads the League by a comfortable margin. He has an average of better than twelve points per game.

Antioch Student Works For GCS

By CHARLOTTE WALSH

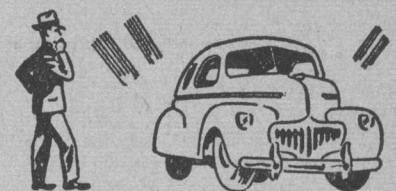

The petite brunette who has waited on you in the tobacco store recently is Beatrice McKee, student at Antioch.

Beatrice is here in Greenbelt because she is interested in co-ops and because Antioch courses are planned for the student to work as well as study during the year. Majoring in business administration, Beatrice is in her senior year and looking forward to her B. A. degree.

Beatrice attends this liberal arts college in Yellow Springs, Ohio with approximately 999 other students. The Antioch theory that students combine practical work with theoretical study results in undergraduates spending 20 weeks in study and 27 weeks at work every year. The college finds jobs for the student in the particular field of interest to him and Antioch scholars can be found working in any state from Maine to California.

Forest Hills, Long Island is now home to Beatrice, although she has lived mostly in New York City. Some other jobs that she has held under this plan were selling for Carson Pirie Scott in Chicago, and managing the campus bookshop for six months.

"Thousands Have Made A Pilgrimage"

Greenbelt children can walk in safety

(The following is a special feature which will run in the COOPERATOR for three issues. The article appeared in the January issue of the Magazine of Art. Frederick Gutheim, the author, has written many articles on architecture and edited the volume, "Frank Lloyd Wright on Architecture". Special permission was granted by the director of the American Federation of Arts to the COOPERATOR to print this article and the accompanying photos.)

By FREDERICK GUTHEIM

Just ten years have passed since the planners and architects of Greenbelt, our first garden city, received from Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the Resettlement Administration, a memorandum instructing them "to create a community . . . designed for families of modest income . . . the land to be held in one ownership." From these instructions the town planners, headed by Hale Walker, and the architects, led by Douglas Ellington and Reginald D. Wadsworth, proceeded to make plans for the original community of 885 homes in Maryland, twelve miles east of Washington, D. C. Subsequently Greenbelt has been enlarged to include several new types of prefabricated houses, and during the war an additional 1,000 dwellings were built as part of the housing program for the Washington metropolitan area. Still not fully grown, today plans are being made for the gradual completion of this government-owned community by private builders and probably for an ultimate complete withdrawal by the government. A similar policy governs the future of the two sister communities, Green Hills (near Cincinnati) and Greendale (near Milwaukee).

Quite apart from those who have lived there, and their friends, more than half a million people have visited Greenbelt in the past decade. Among our great public works, perhaps only the TVA has attracted more interest and evoked more favorable comment from hundreds of distinguished visitors from overseas, who have travelled widely and with discrimination in the United States. Greenbelt is unique as a demonstration of the possibilities of housing and community building, and thousands of Americans have made a pilgrimage there to see it with their own eyes. No other community housing project has received such wide publicity, or aroused such violent controversies. Scenes of Greenbelt were chosen to show the ideal American community in the conclusion of our best urban planning film, "The City." Today, a decade after its inception, the grip this community of barely 10,000 people exercises over the imagination of thousands of our citizens is undiminished. Greenbelt has often been emulated, never duplicated.

Since the time Greenbelt was commenced we have built in the United States through public action more than 450,000 houses, distributed in about 400 cities throughout the nation, all planned according to minimum standards and many of them designed by our most distinguished architects. Many outstanding privately developed communities on a large scale, in the financing of which the government has often shared, ranging from tall apartment buildings of Parkchester to Maplewood, Louisiana, and Baldwin Village in California, have been built. Some of these public and private housing projects contain from three to five thousand houses—larger by far than Greenbelt. Some profess to be garden cities in the Greenbelt manner. Many of them have enjoyed a reasonable degree of public interest. But none of them has attracted the sustained popular enthusiasm evoked by Greenbelt, none has captivated its visitors—or indeed, its residents—to the same extent.

Greenbelt did not spring from the brow of the Resettlement Administration without predecessors. Since the publication of Sir Ebenezer Howard's "Tomorrow," the classic statement of the case for the garden city, forward thinkers in the United States as in other nations have been fascinated with the possibilities of a new kind of living opened up by Howard's vision. They have been profoundly moved by the English examples of Weymouth, Letchworth, and the other garden cities that have actually been realized in brick and stone. In its detailed planning Greenbelt also owed more than a little to the earlier American experiments, notably the town of Radburn, New Jersey, planned for the City Housing Corporation by Henry Wright and Clarence Stein. But despite such antecedents, Greenbelt, as a fully developed expression of the garden city idea, was new in the United States—so new, in fact, that one of its principal avowed purposes was to serve as a demonstration. One must concede that in this it has been successful beyond the greatest hopes of its creators.

But the experts tell us that by many of the customary standards of successful housing Greenbelt is a failure. That is one of the many explanations offered of why the experiment has not been repeated by Federal authorities in the hundreds of thousands of houses it has since constructed. Located beyond reasonable commuting distance from its central city, the source of most employment, the community has never been permitted to develop that cornerstone of true garden cities—local industries within walking distance of homes. Such industries were originally planned, but selfish interests prevented their location in Greenbelt. The community remains "a dormitory town."

Conceived in a period of great unemployment, its use—perhaps abuse—as a work relief project has prevented any reasonably accurate calculation of its actual cost. Some students of housing economics believe that close to one-third of the total cost of the project should be written off to intentionally wasteful methods of construction and the excessive use of manual labor in the interests of making work. The accounting jumble that has resulted makes it almost impossible to say whether or not the project is profitable, or to predict what would happen were it built today under more normal conditions.

Constructed near the beginning of our national experience in large-scale, low-cost housing, the project has since been surpassed by many others in the efficiency of its general plan and the economy and convenience of its individual houses. Structure and equipment are inadequate or unsatisfactory in some instances. A hybrid, it stands neither as a representative private

Walton League Due For Charter

The Greenbelt Chapter of the Isaac Walton League will hold its regular meeting Wednesday, February 5, at 8 p. m. in the Center school.

Jack Stowell, Regional Director and Eastern Representative of the League, will present the charter to the Greenbelt Chapter. Persons becoming members on or before the night of the meeting will be charter members of the local chapter. Motion pictures and guest speakers are on the program and permanent officers will be elected.

The Greenbelt chapter is the first Isaac Walton League Chapter to be organized in Prince Georges County. All persons living in Greenbelt and neighboring communities are eligible for membership. The League was organized for the purpose of furthering the enjoyment of fishing, hunting and other outdoor activities and the conservation of national resources.

Ten members of the Greenbelt chapter attended a meeting of the Regional Council at the Willard Hotel January 26, where delegates from Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania met to elect regional officers. Jack Stowell was re-elected Director of the Regional Council.

AVC To Elect State Delegates

The next meeting of the Greenbelt Chapter, American Veterans Committee will be held on February 5 at 8:30 p. m. in room 221 of the center school.

Delegates and alternates to the State convention will be elected and the convention platform will be discussed. A report on the status of plans for the convention will be given by the chapter Chairman, Samuel J. Ringel, who is in charge of public relations for the convention, which will be held in Baltimore on February 21, 22 and 23.

Adult night typing classes begin for the 2nd semester on February 3. Beginners and advanced students can enroll for a fee of $1.00 for the semester. Classes meet on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 8 to 10 p. m. at the Greenbelt High School; Miss Annamarie Dretsia, instructor.

A child's life may depend upon your contribution to the drive for funds to combat polio.

housing development, nor does it belong in the long line of subsidized low-rent housing projects developed by the Federal Public Housing Authority and its predecessor agencies, although Greenbelt today is managed by FPHA.

But when we say that Greenbelt is a failure by most accepted standards of housing design and economics, let us make sure whether we are criticizing Greenbelt or the standards of successful housing we use today. How can a community be a failure, even in a bookkeeping sense, that offers better living conditions than any city in the United States? Within Greenbelt's 3,300 acres each house is assigned its planned location in a garden-like setting, perpetually surrounded and protected against intrusion by a wide green belt of publicly owned land. Modern shopping centers, movies, schools, a swimming pool, tennis courts and other recreation facilities are within walking distance of each house. Children can walk or bicycle to school over specially planned lanes, through beautiful groves of trees, and never cross a traffic artery. Rural and urban life are here integrated, each playing its assigned role. A healthy and active community life flourishes, from social clubs to local politics, from church activities to the management of cooperative stores.
